Evening Chat

Bazaars.
Now is the time to watch for bazaar sales. Many a pretty Christmas present may be bought and laid away so that on Christmas day one's friends and relatives may all have a genuine handmade present. There isn't any easier, easier way to become possessor of something really valuable than through the church bazaars, many of which are held in December. There are many women who are not gifted when it comes to fine hand sewing and embroidery or crocheting and all of these fine touches make a Christmas present truly beautiful. The simplest handkerchief if hand made takes on added worth and can never be called a cheap present, even though a small sum of money paid for it.

It Truly Happened.
I'm so sorry I missed one of our recent weddings in the city which recovered one of the most thrilling ends imaginable. I've heard tell of a young woman who carried a cake of ivory soap up the aisle and wore her bed-room slippers—and I've seen and heard all manner of things when it comes to the groom coming out too strong on the "I wills" or losing the ring or some other such wild addition to the ceremony but they tell me that the bride had nothing on a certain newlywed couple when it comes to soul kisses and that the stipulated ten feet allowed for a kiss was not in it when it came to the moment after the preacher pronounced them man and wife. Even the minister was alarmed and the audience hung its head. They say it wasn't more than a fraction of a second after the ceremony that the brand new husband and the brand new wife made one grand clench which was of such length that nobody knew what to do. During the ceremony the gentleman in question held the tiny hand of the wife-to-be with both his, fearful lest she disappear just at the crucial moment. No doubt that explained his ardent when she was actually his and I've every reason to believe that the two have no recollection whatsoever of what happened after that and that what you tell them a year from now they'll not believe a word of it. Oh, well—it's all in a lifetime and we're glad the two did forget they were on earth instead of in Heaven. But it's no use putting on any more movies for awhile for there never was one made to equal the one witnessed, and no one could possibly look at a make-believe one and get the same thrill.

The Rosebuds and the Lady.

Some of the prettiest pink and white rosebuds in all the world appeared at a very pretty party last evening. And some exquisite rose-shaped ice cream came along after while in the way of refreshments with other nice things. The party—really a musical—was perfect in all its appointments and the nicest thing about it was the really good music with every number on the program truly artistic. One pretty little lady in a wide fawn colored hat to match a dear fawn colored silk dress trimmed in coral sang in her usual simple, unaffected manner some songs which went straight to the heart and as an encore she announced with a smile "Well, I'll have to sing it all over again for I don't have any more for tonight!" Why can't we all do and say things just as simply and with a touch of consciousness. It is one of the hardest tasks in the world to most women to enter and leave a room in an unconscious manner—unless she has just been given a dozen whiffs of ether and is leaving on a stretcher for the operating room. Heaven only knows why we can't all be simply but true it is that we can't. And I don't believe there was a woman present last evening who isn't willing to give lots of credit to the woman who knows how to do this different thing. There are some folks we dislike to compliment but there are others we feel differently about.

This Is Rather New, Girls, For the Winter-time, Anyway.

Some of the girls in the city have taken to dressing like the movie stars just before they fall into bed at dream time with the possible difference in length of nether garments. One of them went into a department store here recently to buy herself some filmy wearing apparel and when she removed her coat and dress, the clerk was amazed to see standing before her a most attractive maiden unclothed in pink silk tights with bottom ruffles and pink silk camisole. No more and no less! Except low shoes and silk hose. To the curious man (and don't you think for a minute the men don't want to know all about it) a camisole is no animal but a piece of straight silk about six inches wide with two ribbon straps mean, to hold it on. In this particular case the young lady's camisole didn't strike her waist line—neither did her thighs and in between.

The clerk says she was worried to death for fear the young lady would catch cold. "All the girls dress that way!" declared the maiden as she pulled on a very filmy dress and a long coat on top of it all. "The less we wear, the better!" she explained.

RED CROSS SEAL IS DOING BIG WORK

Tuberculosis Deaths Almost Cut in Half in Quarter Century.

The National campaign against tuberculosis in which West Virginia within the past few years has come to play a leading part, is directed by The National Tuberculosis association, under whose guidance the forces engaged in this fight against consumption have grown rapidly year by year since 1895. In that year there was only one organized tuberculosis society and one tuberculosis sanitarium. Today there are 1,030 state and local societies in every section of the Union, 691 tuberculosis sanitariums, thousands of visiting nurses, hundreds of open air schools, thousands of free clinics and dispensaries.

Measured in human lives, the results of this work might be summed up in the statement that in 1895 the death rate from tuberculosis was 209 per 100,000 population. Today the rate is 140 per 100,000 population. A saving of 60,000 lives annually.

The death rate of West Virginia is more than 1,000 annually from tuberculosis. How would the death of 1,000 persons from tuberculosis affect West Virginia? Taking the figures of Prof. Fisher of Yale—"the value of a human life be placed at $4,000 it would cost West Virginia $4,000,000 annually. To this must be added that which never can be reduced to "dollars and cents, namely, the incalculable amount of suffering, unhappiness and misery caused by this disease in our own state.

Funds derived from the sale of Red Cross seals, the cheery little holiday greetings, which sell at a penny a piece, will reduce this number of deaths and relieve the distress caused by tuberculosis.

Ten years ago there was not a tuberculosis nurse and very few nurses of any kind, no clinics, no sanitariums. Today, we have nurses, clinics, sanitariums, health campaigns, county visiting nurses, the Modern Health Crusade in the schools, field workers and numerous means of educating the people along health lines and how to prevent tuberculosis.

Funds from the sale of Red Cross Seals in West Virginia furnish the means to do the work and fight tuberculosis in this state.

The Red Cross Seal—as millions of Americans know today, is an agent of happiness and health. It was originated in 1907 by Miss Emily Blissell, of Wilmington, Delaware, who learned through Jacob Reiss of similar seals that were sold in Norway for the purpose of raising funds with which to fight disease.

Miss Blissell persuaded the Red Cross to take up the idea, with the result that the seals were sold in a limited quantity in communities in 1908. The seals yielded approximately $3,000. The Red Cross then decided to issue the seal each year and turn the proceeds over to the National Tuberculosis Association for the purpose of financing the campaign against tuberculosis. The number of seals sold in America increased in leaps and bounds until

In 1917 the total reached $1,800,000. In 1918, as a war measure, the seals were not sold.

This year, the seals are "on sale" beginning December 1. More than half a billion seals have been printed for distribution to state and local agents. In addition to the seals, we have this year, "Health Bonds" in denomination ranging from $5 to $100 to be sold in lieu of seals to large contributors, who do not send out a sufficient quantity of mail in December to make use of all the seals they would like to purchase.
